1. ☐ We pursued the possibility of establishing Allocation 66 for management of clandestine electronics equipment and to transfer the equipment from Allocation 26. However, we found that to establish a new allocation at this time would not be economically feasible because a new computer program would have to be prepared and several hundred man-hours would be required to make the change. Consideration was then given to making the allocation changes by inputting approximately 4,000 transactions manually, but we do not have the personnel resources to accomplish this task.

2. ☐ Since management responsibility for all items in Allocation 26 is being transferred from the Office of Communications to the Office of Technical Service, action is currently being taken by Supply Division to change the Cognizant Office Code from "C" to "T." This change, in addition to meeting the requirement requested in paragraph 2 of reference b, will also allow Logistics to process amendments, cancellations, receipts, and issues against outstanding replenishment and customer requisitions without any financial adjustments.
